All the volunteers except the kitchen team went there and started the work, some were filling the sacks, some carrying them to spot, some arranging them properly, some were carrying the stones and some helping wherever the help is needed. Although the dam was small but the collective efforts put by all the volunteers were very large, it was an exhausting job but all the volunteers done it pretty well without any pain.

After that all volunteers moved to the village for tree plantation. Volunteers were divided into the groups of two and were given two plants with them. Volunteers visited peoples houses and with their help, planted a tree in every house of the village and asked the villagers to take care and grow the plants.
